YALE UNIVERSITY
SCHOOL OF NURSING

THE ALUMNAE AND THE SCHOOL

The alumnae association is now 194 persons strong. Since the graduation of the first class nine years ago, we have been steadily increasing in number and varied nursing experiences. By now we are able to interpret nursing on the basis of first-hand tested experience gained in different fields. By now we should have a comprehensive appreciation of nursing problems in both schools and communities. By now we should perhaps begin to pool our working knowledge and use it for our common interest, the Yale School of Nursing.

Our constructive support is now needed for continuance of the educational ideals of the School. Like other institutions, Yale University and the New Haven Hospital are feeling the effects of the depression; funds for the hospital nursing service are restricted. The educational environment for the students has inevitably suffered because of the reduction of graduate staff nurses for the wards and the increased nursing load.

The situation is serious. As alumnae vitally interested in the School, we cannot remain aloof. If we cannot actually create an endowment fund for adequate graduate nursing service so that the students may be free for carefully selected and supervised experience, we must at least acquaint ourselves with the situation and submit some constructive suggestion for lessening the gap between standards and reality.

At an alumnae meeting in March a committee composed of Gertrude Zurrer, '27, chairman, Gladys Sweeney, '26, Barbara Munson, '28, Elinor Moyle, '29, Hazel Bowles, '30, Lois Bliss, '31, Helen Archer Bosworth, '32, Helen Peters, '33, Lucille Olson, '34, was formed to study the present dilemma and present recommendations to the various bodies controlling the destiny of the School. The outcome of this study will be available at the annual alumnae meeting this coming June.

Regional Groups

There are now fifty-seven alumnae in New Haven, twenty-three in New York and Brooklyn, eight in Boston, six in Hartford, six in San Francisco, five in Providence, four in Philadelphia, and smaller numbers elsewhere.

The graduates in New Haven, who have been most active in alumnae effort and responsibility, are eager to share participation more widely. The formation of active regional groups of alumnae, however small, would be an aid in considering the trends of nursing education in the School, in disseminating accurate information about the School, in possible interviewing of applicants too remote for a personal conference with the Dean, and in contributions to the student scholarship loan fund.

Such groups could help to represent more truly the progressive thoughts and desires of the total body of alumnae. Graduates in New Haven would like to share alumnae responsibilities and privileges with all. Let us be prepared to arrange a plan for regional alumnae groups when we gather in June for the annual meeting.

With the growing number of students entering the School, and with the grave economic situation generally, worthy applicants for aid from the student scholarship loan fund are increasing.

This year the alumnae association has staged two affairs for the benefit of this fund, the projects being successful both financially and socially.

The Fall Frolic last October, managed by Isabel Howe, '31, contributed fifty dollars and proved a good mixer for the start of the school year.

The Fourth Annual Opportunity Sale this spring, directed by Ethel Elliott, '34, netted two hundred dollars, as well as providing for much individual sartorial embellishment, even if second-hand.

FROM THE DEAN

We are about to present the tenth class of the School for their award of merit. Those of us who have watched the growth and achievement of the School during these eleven years have a deep joy and satisfaction in what has been accomplished. Our graduates are scattered east and west, north and south, and across the seas, seeking to make the world a healthier and a happier place.

The growth of any school lies in the ideals and achievements of its graduates. The future of our School depends on the daily accomplishments of our graduates. People judge the value of the School by the completeness with which the graduates themselves bring satisfaction to the community.

So to you, my dear colleagues, we look for support, for inspiration, and for sympathy, advice, and confidence as we seek to maintain and advance the standards set forth by Miss Goodrich in the establishment of the School. With these before us, we are endeavoring to add to the curriculum or to revise it in accord with the changing situations which we are called upon to meet.

You will remember the remark which periodically drifts in to us, that the Yale School of Nursing is not primarily concerned with the care of patients, but largely with the theory of nursing. In accord with this idea, an applicant once requested a catalogue of "the so-called course in literary nursing." What kind of a nurse could possibly be developed through such a course, when the very heart of a nursing curriculum is imbedded in the care of patients in the wards of the hospital and in the homes of the community?

In the School we are placing major emphasis on the courses in nursing, not primarily as they are related to the technical procedures, but as they are related to the patient in his entirety. The course in the principles and practice of nursing has been enlarged to include the social and economic, as well as the physical and psychological, factors of sickness and health. The psychologist, sociologist, and social worker participate in the presentation and discussion of the fundamental factors involved in such nursing procedures as the admitting of patients to the hospital and discharging them back to the community.

In analyzing the intricate problems the nurse meets with every patient, we have been impressed with the number and variety of situations which arise and with the diverse knowledge the nurse must have, not only to give skilled clinical nursing care, but to assure the patient an intelligent consideration and care for his personal needs and welfare.

A new emphasis, therefore, has been placed on nursing. The students are encouraged to see the psychological and social implications of nursing and to appreciate the hospital and community relationships. Saturday morning seminars have been added to the curriculum this year and have been very helpful to the students. During these periods the students have an opportunity of bringing for discussion problems arising from their daily experiences. The students, because of a deeper understanding, have worked with an exceptional spirit of coöperation and have been enabled, under trying and difficult situations, to do extraordinarily good work.

We look forward to having a great many of our graduates back for Commencement. The alumnae are no longer an insignificant group, but an important and influential body. Your numbers are increasing each year, and we now have 194 graduates. We are hoping to see many of you here in June.

EFFIE J. TAYLOR.

The alumnae association is pleased to be included in the recently formed Student Council of the undergraduates of the School.

This Student Council, composed of three representatives from each class, has been initiated and formed by the students themselves with the three-fold function of fostering Yale ideals, interpreting student opinion, and sponsoring student activities.

The Council has invited the president of the alumnae association to meet with the group in an advisory capacity.

We are encouraged by this exhibition of constructive student thought and feel that the Council will lead to a closer understanding and sharing of the problems of the School by the administration, the students, and the alumnae.

EPISTOLARY EXTRACTS

From Adelle Baldwin Lanoue, '31, who, with her husband, is with the École de Pasteurs et d'Instituteurs in Africa training protestant natives to become teachers and pastors in regional schools:

"Our students are mostly married men with two or three children. Each family has a brick and cement house, a kitchen, and a separate toilet. The wives must also come to school, and we teach them as much as we can. Those over thirty-five are usually not able to learn to write and will read but haltingly, but we instil as much Bible as we can, to say nothing of hygiene, mothercraft, sewing, and some drawing.

"We have a dispensary here, but because of the heavy teaching program outsiders are not encouraged to come. There are other hospitals and dispensaries not far away. Our own people's illnesses keep two native dispensers busy, as well as our doctor in her spare time. She goes home in June, which will leave the medical work in my hands. A new infirmary is being built which will facilitate immensely the care of those seriously ill.

"Our drastic cut in appropriations is a great handicap, but may be a blessing in disguise, as it is forcing us to train our natives into responsible positions."

From Jean Russell, '32: "At present I am not working, but in bed convalescing from rheumatic fever. In February last year I went to the University Hospitals in Cleveland to do more work in pediatrics. I stayed there until the third week of September, but of that time worked only six weeks, as I first had scarlet fever and then rheumatic fever following. On returning to work after a leave of absence, I again had symptoms of the infection. The doctors there advised me to go south to live for at least two years.

"Being in bed is hard, but I hope it will not be too long before the infection clears. I am so anxious to work and much prefer the rôle of nurse to that of patient. On the other hand, I feel that in being a patient I have learned a great deal which will help me give better nursing care later on."

From Katherine Upchurch, '32, an instructor in the Memphis General Hospital nursing school: "The good old south has reclaimed me, and I find it pleasant being on the native soil again. I'm working as never before in my life, but must admit I enjoy it. My contribution ranges from coaching a basket-ball team to devising a system of blocking student experience that would warm Miss Melby's heart."

From Helen Ritchie Kyle, '28: "The best news of all is that we now have two lovely children—a girl Allison, aged nineteen months, and a boy Paul, aged two months. They are indeed a credit to the Yale School of Nursing, and I wish you might see them. There isn't a day that my training isn't used many times over in the work of managing a household and caring for the babies. The ability to distinguish between the essential and the non-essential has been invaluable, and I have been grateful in more ways than one for my years at Yale.

"I do most of my husband's reading for him and help him write his papers, as well as assisting occasionally in the county tuberculosis clinic here, but my "job" at present is largely at home."

From Grace Mason Allenbach, '30, who is supervisor of an FERA home attendant project: "We have about seventy-five women, graduate nurses, practical nurses, and domestics, working their relief rating per week in homes of families who have illness and who are on relief. The service includes routine bedside nursing and housekeeping duties. The cases are referred to us by the district nursing association and the city visitors or case workers.

"I have a graduate nurse as an assistant who supervises the work in the homes by making calls at least once a week. I believe our efforts have been valuable and beneficial in helping the families and coördinating the public health department with the relief division.

"My husband opened his office here in Cleveland as a practicing physician last September."

From Jeannette Snyder, '29, who is in Beirut, Syria, with Caroline Ladd Widmer, '29, and Antoinette Daniels, '30: "We are trying a new stunt here to give the nurses the village health experience which both they and the country need. In coöperation with a volunteer organization of the university called The Village Welfare Association, composed of faculty and students, we go out to the villages of a certain area to be responsible for the health angle of the work. As you may imagine, the work is mainly therapeutic because of the needs of the people, but we have hopes of swinging into the preventive aspect in the course of the years. So far (I have gone out for two summers only) I have taken only graduate nurses so that they may be prepared to carry on with students after I leave.

"The papers say you have had warm weather, and so have we. Then, too, we go in for vermin out here in a big way. You would enjoy the drive from Jerusalem to Beirut in the spring when the wild flowers are in bloom . . . lovely poppies, anemones, daisies, and cyclamen.

"I must be off to be athletic with Laddie and Tony . . ."

The alumnae are gradually becoming more active in local and state nursing organizations.

In Connecticut, Priscilla Halpert, '27, is president of the board of directors of the New Haven Central Registry for Nurses and is program chairman for the educational section of the state nurses' association. At state meetings during the past year, she has spoken on methods of correlating ward and classroom teaching; Mae McCorkle, '27, on the incorporation of social hygiene in the nursing curriculum; and Eleanor King, '32, on ways of helping students organize their nursing assignments.

In Rhode Island, Frances Thielbar, '32, is secretary of the State League of Nursing Education.

"JUST MARRIED"

Anne Goodrich, '26, to Mr. F. C. Sanford Waters.

Charlotte Birely, '26, to Dr. Gustaf Lindskog, instructor in surgery, Yale University.

Jane White, '29, to Mr. Richard E. Woodbury.

Carolyn Ladd, '29, to Mr. Robert Widmer.

Lucy Shaw, '31, to Mr. McAlister Avery Schultz, federal forester.

Eleanor Harmon, '31, to Mr. Ralph Batchelder, manager of the White Mountain ski-jumpers in Gilford, N. H.

Eileen Ditchburn, '31, to Mr. Eric Troop. Eileen has been studying child psychology this year at the University of Toronto.

Iva Stebbins, '33, to Mr. John Kneisley, instructor in the public schools of Dayton, Ohio.

Virginia Dye, '33, to Mr. Thomas Virgin. Virginia has had to give up her FERA public health work temporarily because of an attack of pleurisy.

Frances Stratton, '34, to Dr. Thomas Shaffer, interne in pediatrics in the New Haven Hospital.

Elizabeth Perry, '34, to Rev. James Walter.

Helen Fowler, '34, to Rev. Charles Boynton, chaplain of Christ School for Boys in Arden, N. C.

Helen Dann, '34, to Dr. Sydney Stringer, interne in surgery in the New Haven Hospital.

Esther Dvorkin, '34, to Mr. A. R. Bloom, aeronautic engineer.

Coming Summer Events

Priscilla Brooks, '31, to Mr. Donald Ward, electrical engineer.

Mary Foster, '31, to Mr. Thomas Samuel, farmer.

Shirley Shingle, '32, to Dr. Edward Speir, interne in surgery in the New Haven Hospital.

Charlotte McKeown, '31, and Dr. McKeown are waiting for the mountain snows to melt, the floods to recede, and the dust storms to subside so that they can V-eight out west for a visit with their families and the establishment of a home and practice for themselves.

Miss Goodrich visited the School last January after her three months of travel, observation, and lecturing in the middle west, especially in and around the University of Minnesota. She brought us vivid impressions of her stay there.

We were invited to meet Miss Goodrich at tea at the Faculty Club, given in her honor by Miss Taylor, and at an after-dinner coffee arranged by the students.

Miss Goodrich expects to enjoy the spring at Far Hills, her home near Colchester, Conn.

Helen Peters and Clara Gross are making their third transcontinental drive this summer, this time a one-way trip. They are planning to work with the outside obstetrical service associated with the University of Oregon.

BORN

During the Past Year

- a boy—to Dr. and Mrs. Phillip Kyle (Helen Ritchie, '28)
- a boy—to Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Thom (Ruth Monrad, '29)
- a girl—to Mr. and Mrs. Leo Simmons (Betty Simmons, '29)
- a girl—to Mr. and Mrs. John Westbrook (Margaret Pettigrew, '30)
- a boy—to Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Fraser (Jean Johnson, '30)
- a boy—to Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Canning (Florane Crooke, '30)
- a boy—to Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Bucholz (Elizabeth Armstrong, '30)
- a boy—to Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Davis (Eleanor Tilton, '31)
- a boy—to Dr. and Mrs. Wm. Roth (Marian Cowperthwaite, '31)
- a boy—to Dr. and Mrs. G. C. Glass (Gladys Boardman, '31)
- a boy—to Dr. and Mrs. James Stringham (Charlotte Stringham, '32)
Charlotte developed bilateral phlebitis and has had a protracted recovery. She is now getting up, however, and wanting to get into the nursing work of the Chinese hospital with which her husband is associated.
- a boy—to Rev. and Mrs. Charles Boynton (Helen Fowler, '34)
- and children, sex unknown to the editor, to
Mr. and Mrs. Francis Barton (Elizabeth Harris, '30)
Mr. and Mrs. Gordon MacKay (Helen Noyes, '30)

Miss Helen Hubbell, who was a member of the early faculty of the School, has returned this year as assistant professor in nutrition.

Verna Smith, '33, was "on call" for Farnum in Bermuda for several weeks this winter.

Eleanor King, '32, will this summer begin teaching the principles and practice of nursing in the University of California nursing school in San Francisco.

Dorothy Peck, '32, and Ruth Johnson, '32, will take more work in nursing education at Teachers College, Columbia University, this summer.

Helen Archer Bosworth, '32, will be moving to New York this summer. Her husband is working with the N. Y. State Department of Health.

Elizabeth Lawton, '34, is receiving her bachelor's degree this spring from the University of California. She shipped herself home on a freighter last summer.

Last fall Dorothy Huey, '31, was forced to give up working because of a bone infection of the leg. She has been resting at home this year and expects soon to be back on two good professional feet.

This summer Elizabeth Bixler, '27, is taking a year's leave of absence from the School. She will direct the courses in psychiatric nursing at the Worcester State Hospital, Worcester, Mass.

Esther Budd, '31, and Elizabeth Bixler, '27, both summered a bit of the winter in Florida.

Gayle Isensee, '31, is doing public health work in Texas with seasonal labor groups, largely Mexican, who "follow the crops." At present she is near Corpus Christi during the cotton picking time.

Hazel Bowles, '30, has been spending this year in graduate work in child psychology at the University of Minnesota. Her thesis deals with behavior problems arising on a pediatric ward and their management.
